Short Answer Questions

1. In five or six sentences, please elaborate on why you are interested in participating in the Humanities Fellows program. What excites you about the program? How might the program relate to your academic goals at UR and any future career plans?

2. Please describe in detail a class you've taken at the University of Richmond that challenged or excited you. What was it about that class that particularly engaged your interest?

3. Name one text (novel, t.v. show, work of art, etc.) that changed your mind about something important. Explain what you used to think and how it specifically changed.

4. The subject of this year's seminar is the question "What Forms the Self?" The question is, at least, double. In one version, it explores the hypothesis that different forms of selfhood (or personhood, citizenship, subjectivity) exist and have existed in different historical moments and geopolitical contexts. In the other, we turn our attention to how our selves come into being: what shapes us? What sustains us? What might change us? Examining this year's theme, what interests you particularly about this topic?
